Governor's Commission Submits Report to State's Chief

Chicago, Jan. 26—(AP)—The Governor's commission to consider the milk situation in the Chicago dairy district reported today to Gov. Len Small and the conference by which they were appointed, recommending the slaughter of tubercular cattle as rapidly as indemnity funds are available.

They advised that a comprehensive program of tuberculosis control, including tests of vaccination against reinfection and home-pasteurization from the funds, to begin immediately and pushed with the greatest possible speed.

The report was adopted unanimously by the committee, said Dr. W. A. Evans, chairman, in presenting it.

Basis of Review

"It was based upon a review of the situation in Chicago, in Illinois outside of Chicago and in the surrounding states in which there are dairy districts," he said. "The commission recommends the extension and control of pasteurization as a satisfactory means of making milk safe. The recommendation is that the method be extended to smaller cities and towns and that the farmers home-pasteurize the milk used by their families, and also the skimmed milk, butter and whey fed to hogs, calves and chickens.

"It recommends control of bovine tuberculosis by tubercular testing, with the slaughter of reacting animals as rapidly as funds may be made available for partially indemnifying the owners.

"The herd-and-area plan for the control of bovine tuberculosis is endorsed.

Vaccination Urged

"The commission recommends that the Calmette or some other plan of vaccination as a means of preventing the reinfection of herds be given a thorough trial under state or federal control.

"It recommends the continuance of an advisory commission to cooperate with the state and federal authorities and with owners and others to promote plans for the control of tuberculosis in Illinois.

"The commission recommended that the above plan be adopted by the conference and that its operation begin immediately and that it go forward with the greatest possible speed.

"They ask the cooperation of every body concerned to speed up the following out of the program."

MEMBERS COAST GUARD HELD IN BOOTLEG PROBE

Forty-eight Others Involved in Alleged Rum-Running

New York, Jan. 26—(AP)—Thirteen members of the coast guard and forty-eight other individuals were indicted today by a federal grand jury investigating the alleged bootleg syndicate headed by "Bill" Dwyer, former race track owner.

Nine of the coast guardsmen named in the indictment are still in the active service. Three separate indictments are returned, charging the 61 defendants with violation of the federal prohibition law and conspiracy to violate the law.

The grand jury has spent six weeks in investigating the alleged rum ring which is represented by the federal authorities as having controlled 18 ocean steamers in the rum running business. Dwyer and more than a score of his confederates were arrested in December and since then four boats supposed to have been in the trade have been seized.

National Funeral for Cardinal Mercier Plan

Brussels, Jan. 26—(AP)—Cardinal Mercier, primate of Belgium, is to be honored with a national funeral in the cathedral of St. Gudule here on Thursday morning. It will be the third such funeral in the history of Belgium.

The body will be brought to the cathedral from Malines and after the ceremony at the cathedral, will be returned to Malines for the entombment in the crypt of the St. Rombaut Cathedral.

Final arrangements required delicate negotiations. On the one hand there was no precedent for holding a national funeral outside the capital and moreover, the government demurred at the cost of transporting to Malines the members of parliament, judges, officials and diplomats.

On the other hand the rubric of the Catholic church requires that the requiem interment shall be celebrated in the Metropolitan church which is in Malines and not in Brussels.

To reconcile these conflicting conditions, it was arranged that the ceremony in Brussels should take the form of a combined memorial service and a national tribute and for the interment proper to be carried out with all the pomp of the rubric at Malines the following day.

Senators Bicker as Vote on World Court Resolution and Reservations Approaches

Final Vote on Measure Tonight or Tomorrow is Hoped For

BULLETIN
Washington, Jan. 26—(AP)—So many senators insisted on talking today on the world court, as well as other subjects that pro-court leaders gave up hope of reaching a final vote before tomorrow.

Washington, Jan. 26—(AP)—Under the tight lid of cloture the senate approached today the vote which will take the United States into the world court. Whether the final roll call will come before adjournment today or be deferred until tomorrow, was problematical. Proponents of adherence have concluded their arguments and opponents now are not inclined to prolong the discussion.

More than a score of reservations to the Swanson substitute resolution of adherence have been offered however, and these must be disposed of before the final vote. Roll calls will be demanded in a number of cases.

Under the rule which the senate invoked yesterday, each senator is limited to one hour on the resolution of adherence and all amendments which have been offered.

Some of these amendments will provoke more or less general discussion, but leaders of the pro-court forces are hopeful that a final decision can be reached by tonight so that the tax reduction bill can be called up Wednesday.

Bickering Half Hour
It took 35 minutes of bickering at the opening of today's session before the senate agreed on the procedure to be followed in consideration of the various amendments and reservations.

The discussions came to an end when Senator Bruce, democrat, Maryland, asked for the third time whether the word "reservations" in the parliamentary agreement now in force was singular or plural and Vice President Dawes answered the word had "an s" on the end of it.

The reservations offered by Senator Swanson, democrat, Virginia, authority of the resolution of adherence, on behalf of proponents of the world court then were taken up.

President Watches
President Coolidge is leaving the working out of world court reservations to Senators Lenroot of Wisconsin and Pepper, Pennsylvania, republicans and Swanson, Virginia and Walsh, Montana, democrats.

He feels they are in a better position than he to know the exact situation, to determine when a vote should be taken and to frame the language of reservations so that they would be practical and in accord with his views.

MAN OWES LIFE TO HIS DOCTOR TAKING CHANCE

Cut Gash Under His Heart and Restored Its Action

Cleveland, Jan. 26—(AP)—Apparently dead for several minutes Earl F. Hauserman, Cleveland manufacturer, is on the road to health today because a surgeon took a chance and had the skill to carry his bold decision through.

Hauserman's heart failed while he was being operated on for appendicitis. Suspending the operation, Dr. T. M. Jackson made a huge incision under the heart, into which he reached and massaged that organ. Slowly heart action was restored and the surgeon finished the operation.

Dr. Jackson said it was one of those rare cases where the heart and nervous system falls under the shock of an operation.

"The breathing stops completely," the surgeon said, "with that goes the heart action, possibly not entirely, but all except an imperceptible thread."

"Some schematists say that if you'll just stand by and wait the case will right itself, but I haven't any faith in that; so when Hauserman failed, I acted."

S O S calls have claimed right of way in the air.

For only 15 minutes last night and Sunday night, have eastern stations been able to broadcast. Dispatches from abroad indicate that only a few "DX" fans are losing sleep in attempts to hear from across the sea in European wee-small hours. With more stations in Europe and South America on the air last night than on Sunday night, reports today show that United States listeners had heard at least nine stations: TEAJ, Madrid, Spain; ZLV, Liverpool, England; 6EM, Bournemouth, England; 2LO, London; CYB, Mexico City; PWX, Havana; OAX, Lima, Peru and LOW and LOX, Buenos Aires.

Four heard in Mass.

Four stations were heard at Marblehead, Mass. Reception of foreign programs were more successful in New England than in mid-west, although in Des Moines, Iowa, a 15 years old fan was raised to the seventh heaven by hearing Mexico City on a two tube set he made himself.

MYSTERY OF SLAYING NOW CLEARED UP

Illicit Love Affair Ends in Death of Miss Dietrich

Philadelphia, Jan. 26—(AP)—Having confessed that he strangled and dismembered Miss Anna May Dietrich, David L. Marshall, chiropractor, was being held without bail today.

Marshall, married and the father of a 12 year old daughter, made a second confession last night in which he admitted strangling the woman, whose cabaret complex, he said, was proving a financial strain upon him. Miss Dietrich, a 34 year old milliner, had ambitions to be a "modern girl."

Early yesterday, having readily told of his acquaintance with Miss Dietrich and of having treated her professionally, Marshall confessed that he had cut up the lady, but steadfastly denied that he had killed her.

Admitted His Lies.
The first confession however, did not satisfy officers, particularly that part where he said the woman had drunk poison because a wealthy New Yorker, with whom she was in love, had jilted her. After much more questioning, he suddenly shouted late last night: "I'm lying. It's all lies. I'll tell the truth now."

Then he said he had strangled Miss Dietrich because she had threatened to inform his wife of their relations unless he gave her more money.

"I knew Miss Dietrich for eight years," he said. "At first she thought I was single."

"Recently she got a cabaret complex," he said. She wanted to go out skylarking at nights. She began taking lessons in the Charleston.

Foiled Financial Strain.
"I told her I couldn't go out with her—I was afraid my wife would find out. Then, too, I began to be afraid of the financial strain. But she insisted that I take her to road houses and to cabarets. She threatened to tell my wife about our relations if I didn't take her out. She wanted to take a whirl at the night life before she became too old."

"Tuesday night the thing came to a climax. She met me at my office. She insisted we go out. I refused. We argued. Again she threatened to tell my wife. I was desperate and in a rage."

"I seized her by the throat to shake her, to make her understand that I couldn't and wouldn't. I pleaded with her to break off our friendship. But she wouldn't listen."

"Then—I don't know what possessed me. The next thing I knew she was dead there before me—on the floor of my office."

It was because he did not want to be charged with murder, he said, that he dismembered the body and disposed of it by throwing the torso and legs in a field at Media and hiding the head under a railroad trestle, a short distance from his home at Bywood Heights.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—

Orange juice, cereal cooked with prunes, thin cream, crisp broiled bacon, creamed potatoes, corn-bread, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—

Ragout of celery, orange pudding, molasses cookies, milk, tea.

Dinner—

Roiled breast of veal, buttered spinach, cabbage and grapefruit salad, whole wheat rolls, Indian suet pudding, milk, coffee.

The dinner meat is one of those dishes that require more time than money but is worth the time. It may be said but nevertheless true that we can't conjure a meal out of thin air. However, if we can spend a few extra "minutes" in the kitchen some days we can spare our every-yawning purses.

Rolls Breast of Veal.

Four pounds breast of veal, 3/4 cup rice, 1 tablespoon grated cheese, 3 cups stock, 1 large onion, 1 carrot, 1/2 small turnip, parsley, thyme, bayleaf, pepper, corns, salt and pepper.

Remove bones and tendons from veal and trim neatly. Season with salt and pepper, spread with sausage meat, roll tightly and bind with string. Put bones and trimmings from meat into a kettle. Add vegetables cut in dice, herbs, salt and pepper. Put roll of meat on top and add water to cover vegetables. Cover kettle closely and simmer for two hours. Boast meat frequently and add water as necessary. Remove roll of meat and strain stock. There should be 3 cups. Boil rice in salted water for 15 minutes. Drain and add to boiling stock. Add meat and simmer for 45 minutes over a low fire. Take up meat and remove string. Stir cheese into rice and arrange in a border on a hot platter. Place meat in the center and serve.

BY CYNTHIA GREY—

Are you a helicopter woman, or a Parma violet lady?

Does your personality call for the flavor of dew-drenched jasmine, or can't your ego struggle along without a little dash of cerise narcissus?

I have been reading the ads which are appearing nowadays in the woman's magazines.

The perfume ads especially have intrigued me. The same copy writers who sold carloads of lingerie by "matching style and color to type," evidently have taken new jobs with the ambergris distillers.

They patter long and loud about the crudity of any refined woman dousing her handkerchief with violet perfume when, if she would only have her personality diagnosed by a phrenologist and perfume specialist, she would know that no handkerchief must ever be put to her nostrils which does not convey the aroma of buckwheat fields in the spring.

Crystal Jade.

"Are you Titian?" inquires one headline. "Never, never, never, if you would be known as the woman of refinement, use any perfume but Gollie's crystal jade—that haunting, tantalizing elusive, esoteric odor which gives sun to your hair and emerald glint to your eyes!"

Dr. Arthur O. Swanson was united in marriage Saturday afternoon to Miss Helen Wales of Polo. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's father, Horatio Wales, formerly mayor of Polo. Rev. Whitsett, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Polo, performed the ceremony before a group of relatives and friends at 2:30 o'clock.

The bride and groom were attended by Miss Clara Swanson and Frank Swanson of Rock Falls, sister and brother of the bridegroom. The bride was attired in a beautiful gown of white crepe knit and carried a shower bouquet of sweet peas and rosebuds.

Following the ceremony a two-course luncheon was served by the bride's sister-in-law, Mrs. Frank Wales, and her intimate friend, Miss Annabel McGrath. The couple were heartily congratulated and extended best wishes for many years of married life.

The bride is one of Polo's most popular and charming young ladies. She is an accomplished musician and is a graduate of the Sherwood Musical school in Chicago. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Hannah Swanson of Rock Falls and is a graduate of the Palmer School of Chiropractic at Davenport, Ia.

The newly married couple led their relatives and friends a merry chase around Polo before they got safely out of town.

Dr. and Mrs. Swanson will be at home at 312 West Mason street, Polo, to their many friends, who wish them much happiness and joy.

A PRAYER, IN THE PROSPECT OF DEATH—

O Thou unknown, Almighty Cause Of all my hope and fear!

In whose dread presence are an hour, Perhaps I must appear!

If I have wandered in those paths, Of life I ought to shun;

As something loudly in my breast, Remonstrates I have done;

Thou knows't that Thou form'd'st me With passions wild and strong;

And list'ning to their wailing voice Has often led me wrong.

Where with intention I have err'd, Or frailty stept aside,

Do Thou, All Good! for such Thou Art, In shades of darkness hide.

Where with intention I have err'd No other plea I have,

But Thou are good; and goodness still Delighted to forgive.

SAFETY FOR PEDESTRIANS.

Striking down of four pedestrians by automobiles in one day in Moline is something to think about. More laws will not help a situation in which the motorist leaves his victim, but not his name or number, and does not report to the police station, but the multiplication of tragedies emphasizes the fact that while regulation of minor traffic goes on apace, here and in other cities, the problem of the pedestrian remains unsolved.

The pedestrian is an individual, not a class. It is not a question of the interest of one group that of another. The motorist may belong to a motor club that looks out for his group interest, but while he is driving to work, his child going to school may be struck by a careless motorist who benefits by the same group interest.

In the business districts of the average city the electrical control gives protection to the pedestrian, and if he elects not to observe that control it is at his own risk. In fact the cities of the east are developing a tendency to make it obligatory upon the pedestrian to observe control devices in the same manner as they are observed by vehicles.

Accidents involving pedestrians more often are outside of the control districts. Few cities have any regulation by which any pedestrian has any rights in residential territory. Los Angeles is pioneering with a rule by which the motorist is compelled to give way to the pedestrian who has entered a crossing zone on any street where traffic is heavy. As we have it now people desirous of reaching street cars risk their lives or miss the car, if compelled to cross a street. Under the Los Angeles plan they have a right to walk in safety to the car.

Of course the pedestrian always has rights equal to those of the vehicle, but he dare not assert them except at personal risk.

Pedestrians are not organized and probably never will be, because most of them are motorists part of the time. It might not be contrary to the principles of the motor club to take some action looking toward safety of the motorist's family, when it is spread out, going to school, going to work or going to a neighbor's.

It is up to a great many motorists to develop a higher degree of personal responsibility. This the motor club ought to insist on, and careful drivers should note and report instances of lack of such responsibility. The driver with a real sense of responsibility does not while in the residential district, toot his horn when he sees a pedestrian about to step off the curb, or when he sees one on the street a few rods ahead of him. He reduces speed and gives the pedestrian a chance to get by. The one with feeling of responsibility—and there are hundreds of them right here in Moline—toots his horn and keeps up his speed, thinks that he has shifted all responsibility. Frequently the pedestrian is frightened into near-panic, and the chances of accident are increased. The irresponsible driver likewise swing around a corner without any reduction of speed.

Let's have less horn-tooting and more courteous slowing up.—Moline Dispatch.

In cases like this, physicians say, "Over-active endocrine glands." The thyroid in maturity, and the thymus gland to considerable extent in youth, regulates the growth and texture of the hair. If a universal cure for baldness ever is discovered, it'll be a glandular extract. Why discover it? Bald-headed men point out, grass never grows on a busy street.

NUISANCES.

To remove carcasses of dead animals from its streets, including 75,000 cats, costs New York City $181,000 a year.

The day is approaching when cities, for health reasons, if no other, will have to prohibit dogs and cats, says an excited reader. He's unnecessarily agitated. A century of dogs and cats does less harm than a minutes of flies and rats.

The Mayflower, historic ship that arrived in 1620, carried 102 passengers. Their living descendants now total over 6000, and 5200 of these have their lineage authenticated by the Society of Mayflower Descendants.

Viewed unemotionally, the Mayflower was simply an immigrant ship. We're all immigrants if we go back far enough, and only a few generations for most of us.

NO. 14—POOR MISTER HAVALOOK'S COLLAR.

"Here, Mr. Sniff. Here's my badge. I resign right now."

"Where can we get fish hooks to go fishing in the laundry pool?" asked poor Mister Havalook.

"Pins will do," said Nick. "I've used them lots of times."

"But where shall we get pins?" asked Nancy. "I didn't bring a single one along."

"Oh, I have loads," said fat Mrs. Jiggs, turning her back.

Everybody laughed for Mrs. Jiggs had enough pins in her apron and dress to start a pin factory.

"Don't tell anyone," she said, "but I have on three dresses, two petticoats and an apron. It took every pin the Pincushion Doll owned to get me together before I came."

"Now for some strings!" said Nick when Mrs. Jiggs' pins were all bent into fish hooks. "Where can we get string for fishing lines?"

"Here," spoke up Miss Pithers, the yarn lady. "I'm all made of string. Here's a rip with an end sticking out. Just pull and you'll get yards and yards. It will do me good to reduce anyway."

"Now for bait," Nick. "What shall we do for bait?"

"Oh, ho, ho, ho!" shouted all the Hildy Go Land people. "We don't need bait to fish for handkerchiefs in a laundry drain."

"That's so," laughed Nick. "I forgot. Now you lead the way, Miss Raggedy and we'll follow."

"It's a nice clean drain," explained the Rag Doll. "Laundry water, which is a perfectly beautiful blue, and reminds one of the sky."

"Won't we find any cheese?" asked the policeman rat who always seemed to be hungry.

"I don't think so," said Raggedy. "I never saw any. Only water bugs."

"Who wants water bugs?" sniffed the rat. "Here's Mister Sniff Whisker. Here's my badge. I resign right now. I'm going back to Ash Can Town and live in peace."

Dr. Cummings' Health Column

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING
Surgeon General, U. S. Public Health Service

What should be done for a black eye?

To relieve the condition, we should first help nature to reduce the swelling by applying to the closed lids every three or four minutes, little squares or circles of moist, white absorbent cotton or linen, four-fold and about as large as a silver dollar which has been laid on a piece of ice until thoroughly cold.

The treatment is most effective when kept up more or less continuously for some twelve to twenty-four hours. Do not permit the compresses to overlap the nose or the patient may develop a cold.

When the swelling has subsided, the removal of the discoloration may be hastened by applying more or less constantly below the lower lid, little pieces of flannel dipped in water as hot as can be borne. Keep up the treatment for half an hour; then, let the patient rest for a couple of hours and repeat the treatment for another half hour, continuing in this alternating manner until the desired result is obtained.

Wounds and burns about the eyes—slight wounds of the inner surfaces of the lids may be treated by dropping into the eye a tepid solution of boric acid, 10 grains to the ounce, or as much as will dissolve.

Burns produced by lime may be immediately treated by dropping a solution of one part of vinegar to four parts of water into the eye and washing the eye with clean water freely. If the eye is burned by acids, and you see it immediately afterwards, you may wash the eyes with lime water or water to which a little baking soda has been added—one-half teaspoon of baking soda to a glass of water.

If you have none of these remedies, then wash the eye by pouring clean tap water gently, but freely, into the eye from a small clean pitcher, until you are sure that you have thoroughly washed out all of the caustic substance.

Later wash the eye at intervals with boric acid solution and apply cold compresses until you are sure there is no serious damage or until the patient can see a physician preferably an oculist.

Congestion of the eyelids may be regarded as a very mild conjunctivitis or inflammation of the eyes. It may be caused by smoke or dust or by exposure to an excessive glare as in the case of firemen. Sometimes, congested eyelids are due to constant reading or embroidering or any steady use of the eyes, particularly when the work is done in a poor light. The germs which accompany a cold in the head may be carried to the eyes by the fingers in rubbing or they may find their way to the eyes directly by passing up the tear duct which leads from the nose to the inner corners of the eyes.

In congestion of the lids, the eyes feel heavy or weary as if there were little grains of sand in them. There may be smarting, burning or itching of the lids and there is a disinclination to prolong the use of the eyes.

The treatment for congested lids is better light, proper glasses if required, rest, attention to the usual requirements of personal hygiene such as balanced diet, as well as the daily bath and adequate sleep. Dark glasses may be used if found helpful, but they are seldom necessary. A few drops of a solution of zinc sulphate made by dissolving one grain of zinc sulphate to an ounce of water may be dropped into the eye two or three times a day as an astringent.

LETTER FROM RUTH BURKE TO LESLIE PRESCOTT

I am writing, dear Leslie, first, to let you know I am well enough to write, for I know you hated to leave me when I was still so very ill. Secondly, I wish to introduce to you, by letter, the loveliest baby that was ever permitted to come into this world. She is lying beside my bed in that gorgeous cradle that you bought while you were here for your god-daughter, Leslie Ruth Burke.

Walter is getting well fast and with the advent of the baby and my convalescence, he has become his old self and we all are very happy.

I wish I were going to be well enough to go over to see the taking of Paula Perier's picture, "Hot Steel," at the mill. I suppose Jack is very glad, however, that I shall not be able to come. I'm sure he is very nervous for fear everything will not go right, after that accident at the mill. Tell him not to worry about it, however, for such things do not come in pairs.

Great Scott! Don't you feel rich with all the money you got from your pearls? I must tell you that Walter brought home to baby Leslie a wonderful pearl the other day and declared his intention of adding to it until he got a grand string, and I made him take it right back to the jeweler.

You see, what you have done to your god-child. You have kept her out of a gorgeous string of pearls. After the burglaries and Zoe's tragic death, I have always felt I would never want to see another of the little milk-white beads as long as I live.

Walter has just come in and says: "Tell Leslie, that if little Jack be- comes himself and grows up as fine as he is now, we'll give him the first choice for baby Leslie's hand."

"He'll have to be some young man though," he said, "to be good enough to ask for the tiny little hand of Miss Leslie Ruth Burke."

I can't be silly—but right down in my heart I wish that some day it might be so.

I've been lying here in bed, the last few days I have been thinking what a wonderful thing our friendship has been and is. Leslie, I thank God that it has been my privilege to call you "friend." There was a time in my life when if you had not stood beside me I would not have wanted to live. Always in my trouble you were there. What grand things we will have to talk about when we are grandmas. Tell Jack I said that. It will give him a laugh.

Dearest Leslie, I want you to know that many, many times, day I paraphrase that couplet of Whittier's and say:

"One woman friend my life has made I have never been betrayed." Whittier would probably turn over in his grave if he heard it, but it's the truth if not poetry. I love you always, dear.

BY E. R. WALTE, Secretary, Shawnee, Okla. Board of Commerce

Norman I. Adams, Vice President of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston, says:

That the business outlook for at least the first part of 1926 is every bit as good as existed in 1925.

That this country as a whole is creating capital at an almost unprecedented pace (excluding the war period) and there is every indication of ample funds available at comparatively reasonable rates for every legitimate business.

That there scarcely ever was a period in our economic history when business was so good and money rates as low as they are today. It is the abundance of credit and the confidence of the people in the future which has brought this about.

That the balance of trade with foreign countries appears to be a factor which may disturb the present business activity in this country.

Which is the present tendency, and the unprecedented volume of United States capital being loaned to European countries, it would appear that eventually the movement of gold would be away from rather than into this country.

SEINING OF ROUGH FISH FROM RIVER SHOWS ITS VALUES

More Game Fish are Being Found in Lower River

Once a year ever since 1913 the Sterling stretch of Rock River has been seined and the rough fish taken out. This year for the first time the stretch of river between the bridge at Erie and the west boundary of Whiteside county was seined under supervision of the game warden says the Sterling Gazette.

The most interesting fact brought out by a comparison of the two parts of the river, the previously seined part and the part seined for the first time, is that a great many more rough fish were taken out west of Erie than were taken out of the river in similar stretches further east in Whiteside county, and also that a great many more game fish were found in the river stretches east of Erie bridge than in the stretch west of it.

Game Warden Sam Cohenour, who has had general supervision of the seining in Whiteside county, after comparing the reports of the special game wardens in charge of the various sections of the river, is now convinced that seining out the rough fish each year has resulted in an automatic stocking of the river with many game fish in the sections that have been thoroughly seined.

Many Game Fish Here.
The Sterling township section has been seined every fall for 12 years, the rough fish taken out and the game fish returned to the water. Paul F. Sonneman, warden in charge of the seining here in 1925, reports 17,800 pounds of rough fish taken out, carp and buffalo being retained, and game killed. Only 42 game were found, and only three turtles. There were 73 catfish, 74 bass, 34 pike, 16 crappies, 34 large perch and several hundred small perch. Robert Cohenour had seining permit for Sterling.

In contrast with Mr. Sonneman's report, Robert L. James, supervising warden for the seining at Erie, reported a total of 47,848 pounds of rough fish. The Erie report shows 5 tons of rough fish sold on the river bank at Erie, 34,448 pounds shipped to fish markets and 3,000 pounds of game destroyed. Mr. James reported the following game fish returned to the water at Erie: white perch 800 pounds, 150 catfish, 6 small mouthed bass, 19 large mouthed bass and 6 pike.

Few Game Fish at Erie.
Comparison of the Sterling and Erie reports shows that almost twice as many rough fish were taken out of the river in the Erie sector as were taken out in the Sterling sector, and about four times as many game fish were found here as in the Erie sector. C. F. Brooker held the seining permit at Erie.
P. J. Mathie, supervising warden for the section of river from the Prophetstown railroad bridge to the lower end of Lathe's island, reported game fish as follows: 5,706 pounds of perch, 150 pounds of catfish, 80 head of bass, 10 pickerel, 2 pike and 16 sturgeons. The catch of rough fish at Prophetstown amounted to 22,100 pounds divided as follows: buffalo, 12,190 pounds, carp 7,000 pounds, sand carp 3,000 pounds. Roy Morse held the seining permit at Prophetstown.

Roy M. Hawse, supervising warden of the seining at Lyndon, reported 11,926 pounds of rough fish, of which 7,926 pounds were shipped and 4,000 pounds sold on the river bank. The game fish reported were 4 rock

Dixon High is Tied for Lead in Conference

The Dixon high school basketball team is now tied for first place with Mt. Morris in the Rock River Valley conference standing. This close fight for first honors was made possible by a sweeping victory over Rochelle on the latter's floor Saturday evening. Dixon emerging the winner by a score of 13 to 7. The locals were not going at top speed at any point of the game but managed to keep a sufficient distance ahead of Rochelle to insure a victory.

By defeating Rochelle Saturday night, Dixon is now tied with the Mt. Morris team for first position, each team having won four and lost one. The entire conference membership will watch with much interest, Dixon's game next Friday night when the team goes to Mt. Morris to meet their opponents in the conference leadership.

sturgeons, 22 pike and 4 bass, all shipped to Spring Grove, Ill., and the following returned to the water: 20 catfish, 12 perch, 13 pickerel and 15 bass. Oliver Osborne held the seining permit at Lyndon.

Sales of Rough Fish.
The sales of rough fish taken from fall amounted to $670.19 in all, which Rock river in Whiteside county last year. Mr. Cohenour has forwarded to the state game warden's office at Springfield, with complete reports of all the rough fish caught and all the game fish returned to the river.

Some of the rough fish were sold on the river banks to many farmers and others who came to buy from the seiners, but the great bulk of the catch was shipped to fish markets in Clinton, Ia., and Chicago. Mr. Cohenour inspected all the fish shipped and sent the shipping bills with the drafts for the money to the state warden's office. Amounts received for fish shipped to markets were as follows: Robert Cohenour, Sterling, $92.69; Roy Morse, Prophetstown, $142.46; Charles Brooker, Erie, $348.78; Oliver Osborne, Lyndon, $78.26.

This is the first time that detailed reports of the catch during the state supervised seining season have been made, and the reports will be read at meetings of the rod, reel and gun clubs of Sterling, Morrison and Rock Island, which will be held in the near future.

Sportsmen Interested.
Sportsmen are evincing a keen interest in the findings of the seiners, and Mr. Cohenour feels that he now has the proof to convince all doubters that seining out the rough fish is a good thing for the game fish, and that game fish multiply and thrive when the rough fellows are cleaned out of their part of the river. The Rock Island sportsmen have been inclined to believe that seining disturbed the game fish and drove them away.

The total amount of rough fish taken from the river in Whiteside county amounted to about 50 tons. It takes a lot of fish food to keep that much fish flesh growing. If the rough fish get it, the game fish don't, and the damage done to game fish by some varieties of rough fish by destruction of fish spawn and tiny game fish, is in proportion to the numbers of destructive fish.

Considering that there are only nine "pools" in the Sterling sector, the sportsmen and others interested feel highly pleased with the showing made by Warden Sonneman and Robert Cohenour, who did the seining. The work was handled carefully and the game fish returned to the river were apparently uninjured by handling. The work began Oct. 21 and the seiners' permits extended until Jan. 1, 1926, but owing to the river freezing over no seining has been done since December 12. The reports were made out after the first of the year and have been checked over for comparative figures by Deputy Game Warden Sam Cohenour.

Peg Tees Growing in Favor With Golf Fans

Chicago, Jan. 25.—(AP)—The expense of teeing golf balls is about to pass from golf clubs to the players, judging from the enormous number of peg tees now used as shown by figures made public today. It was only a few months ago that peg tees made their appearance. They had to be given away at first to induce golfers to use them, but now the sales have mounted until one manufacturer alone sold 50,000,000 last year.

There are several varieties, including a papier mache style molded like

Quick Way to End Dangerous Cough

Why let a dangerous cough hang on when you can, through a simple treatment, get speedy relief and often break it up completely in 24 hours?

This treatment is based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. It has a double action. It not only soothes and heals irritation, but also removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. So the worst cough quickly disappears.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

This expenditure was in addition to the supplying of some 90,000 sand boxes on the five thousand golf courses at an expense of about $10 a box, or nearly $1,000,000. It is predicted that the price of wooden and paper tees will be reduced in case their use becomes universal and sand boxes will disappear.

Legion bowlers of the American Legion crew were no match for the American Legion crew when both teams lined up on the Pastime alleys last evening for final combat. # The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted

By GERTRUDE S. &amp; WENTWORTH-JAMES

 "The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted" with Irene Rich, is a pictorialization of this story by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

John Mannerling, district attorney, finds his wife, Eileen, in the apartment of Jerome Wallace, his opponent in the political race until his withdrawal that very night. He curses both and storms out. Eileen, in desperation, enters a taxi and bids the operator "Drive, drive, drive." He leaves her at the hotel in a suburban town, where she is recognized by Diane Bledsoe, who goes with young Bob Mannerling the night their automobile struck and killed a woman.

CHAPTER XII—Continued

And what was more, now as Eileen, left finally alone, sank wearily down upon the edge of the bed, to fall back across it completely exhausted, Diane was still sending her horse thundering along the wooded road which led to her father's beautiful lodge and applying whip and spur, as if pursued by some invisible fiend incarnate.

Reaching the lodge she dismounted and tossing the reins of her foaming steed to an astonished groom rushed straight upstairs to her own bedroom. There, as if yet followed by this invisible terror, she burst into tears and pacing up and down the room, fell to wringing her hands. Amidst every luxury that money could buy this pampered child of the rich seemed the picture of misery and woe.

Soon growing somewhat calmer, she turned to her desk and after studying a moment her fingers felt that his action was based on the fact that Mrs. Mannerling was found in a notorious roadhouse during a raid last night.

Bledsoe read and having inwardly digested it all raised his eyes from the paper and sniffed.

"Wallace is a smart man, a damned smart man, Mr. Bledsoe. They don't come any smarter." "Humph!" muttered Bledsoe in tones which might have dulled a less satisfied heart.

"You've got a good eye, Mr. Bledsoe," continued Slick, as if he had suddenly set up as an oculist. "You picked a winner and he gave you a good run for your money."

Mr. Bledsoe looked doubtful. Indeed, there was a vague something about him which might have led one to suspect that personally he was of the opinion that he had backed an also ran in this race of Slick's imagination.

But so filled with pride and contentment was Slick that he never noticed this.

"You couldn't beat it—no, not in a thousand years—that little scheme of Wallace's to get Mannerling out of office. It worked—I'll say it worked," chuckled Slick, and his manner said plainly: "Why shouldn't it work, I helped to do it?"

But in the face of all this enthusiasm Bledsoe remained strangely cold. Now he shot a keen glance at the speaker.

"What did Wallace have to do with it?"

"Do with it!" Slick drew himself up with pride, even if his grammar did lapse sadly. "Me an' him did it. Yes, sir, you've got nobody to—er—thank but me an' Wallace for that smooth little trick."

"Trick?" Bledsoe looked surprised, more than surprised, but no flood of gratitude burst from his lips.

"This—you two did this thing?" he said slowly, indicating the newspaper.

"We did it. If you don't believe me look here." With a knowing wink he produced the signed statement for the possession of which Eileen had struggled in vain. "This is what took her to the roadhouse—to get it. She was so crazy to help her kid that she didn't have any more sense than a Jaybird."

"How did you get the paper?"

"H—ll, I kept it. What do you suppose? I just kidded her along. You know my way. It was like taking milk from a baby."

"And the raid?" said Bledsoe softly.

"Framed—everything pulled off like clockwork."

"And do you mean to tell me that you two so managed that thing that Mannerling has no idea why his wife went to that roadhouse?"

"Sure," said Slick, drawing himself up proudly and fairly beaming on Bledsoe. "That's the best part of the whole business. Mannerling's got it in his head that his wife double-crossed him because she was in love with Wallace."

His face purple with rage Bledsoe leaped to his feet.

"Why, you scoundrel! You d—d dirty, sneaking pair of skunks!" he bellowed and turned towards the door.

Shocked beyond belief, Slick sat there when he had gone. In the moment of victory had come defeat. Slowly he straightened himself, and he might have been a wounded soldier raising himself upon his elbow to gaze at a conquered field in search of succor.

"D—n," whispered Slick, so low that it might have been the soft sigh of a summer's zephyr—"D—n the luck to h—ll!"

Then he slowly hitched himself towards the telephone. In the hour of defeat that indomitable spirit was uplifting him. That masterly brain was evolving some new strategical move ere the smoke of battle cleared. It was not to Wallace he called. Standing upon his own feet in more ways than one, he called the railroad station.

"Say," said Slick hurriedly, "reserve me a lower for San Francisco tonight!"

CHAPTER XIII

John Mannerling entered the hall to walk slowly along the corridor and pause by the jaller.

"I want," he said with an effort, "I want to see my son."

Wandering about with Seumas, chief of Clann Fhearghais, I strolled into this quiet, brownstone building, just off of Central Park.

The chief is a soldier of fortune, adventurer, explorer, and discoverer. His kilt, his sporrán and his uncut hair mark him, wherever he goes, as a Highlander. He wears no other garb, for he is by birth and right, chief of the clan. Few wars in the world have missed seeing him in the ranks somewhere. Few corners of the earth that he cannot discuss.

And there was Francis Gow-Smith. A few months ago he was in the heart of the jungle near the headwaters of the Amazon, playing a daily game with death. Indian tribes are his specialty. He studies their customs and habits, learns their ways and their languages.

In a month more, he will go to the valley of the Xingu river in Brazil. Here are reputed to be more than 100 tribes of Indians, none of them has been seen by white men.

In another corner sat Captain Johann Menander, Arctic explorer. The captain has spent 20 of his 48 years in sailing the seven seas, to see what was "beyond the horizon." Now there are no horizons for him. He has seen them all. He lectures a little, writes a little, and finds a warm place by the radiator when the wind comes off the Hudson.

And there were Harold Noyce, of Wrangle Island fame, and "Sandy" Smith, with nearly 50 years spent in the Arctic, hurrying away to truck oil for a Polar flight crew.

"Sandy" in his youth loved the bagpipes. He played them in front of the church in his little town in Scotland, and was ousted for the sacrifice. Then, he went to Canada and on into the Arctic.

As he and his partner were crossing a frozen plain, Sandy felt himself sinking. His partner pulled him out. His clothing was covered with seep oil, which had not frozen. A new United States oil reserve came from that accident.

Four hundred men, all recognized by their fellows as men who have heard the sweet voice of hazard are on the club roll.

Pres. MacMillan, Nansen, Roosevelt, Hudson, a hundred others are pictured on the walls. And here, before a fireplace, sit the song of hazard swapping yarns of strange lands and people while just outside the honk of taxis and staccato of the trip hammers sound the song of a land of skyscrapers and struggling humans.

Shawneetown, Ill., Wants Appropriation for River

Washington, Jan. 25—(AP)—The house rivers and harbors committee held a hearing today on the bill of appropriation 100,000 to improve a harbor at Shawneetown, Ill., which is part of a plan to make a nine foot gauge throughout the Ohio river.

Representative Williams, republican, Illinois, author of the bill, said Shawneetown was the only point within 10 miles of the river having a harbor. The project, he said, was primarily for navigation but incidentally for flood control. A four mile levee would be built.

Members of the committee indicated a survey by army engineers would be necessary before the appropriation could be recommended.

Thomas R. Reid, a resident of the district, said the project would enable adjacent coal mines to use river barges to transport their product to markets and that the country was a heavy producer of corn and was thinly populated. He related that Shawneetown was founded by the government in 1810 with transportation in view, at the time when rivers were only arteries of commerce.

Anxious to see life, BARBARA HAWLEY, 25, jilted BRUCE REYNOLDS and gets a job on the Chicago Telegraph. BOB JEFFRIES, police reporter; JEROME BALL, man about town, and Barbara are at a road house when a prominent man kills himself. Barbara connects LYDIA STACY, wealthy widow, with the case by a red scarf found at the inn.

Mrs. Stacy likes Bruce. He ignores her advances so she refuses to invest in Vale Acres, his realty firm, and tells ANDREW McDERMOTT, managing editor of the Telegraph, that the firm is crooked. Manners, Bruce's partner, absconds, and when the affair is given publicity Bruce blames Barbara.

Barbara's invalid mother dies and Barbara takes an apartment with Fanny, McDermott's daughter. She tries to cure Fanny of her infatuation for Ball, and the girl accuses her of wanting Ball herself.

A factory girl, VIOLETTA CRANBY, wins Bruce through Barbara's "lovelorn" column. Barbara tries to find solace in her work. McDermott sends her to a convention of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, where Barbara sees Manners. Manners, arrested and brought back to Chicago, drags in Bruce.

Bruce goes on trial. When Mrs. Stacy refuses to help him, Barbara confronts her with the red scarf. Mrs. Stacy surprises everybody, even Barbara, by testifying, so Bruce is acquitted. Bruce, passing with Violetta, snubs Barbara. At her apartment she finds a note from Fanny saying she has married Jerome and gone to Chicago.

CHAPTER XXII

THE summer wore on. Asphalt pavements began to soften and children ran barefooted after ice wagons in the streets of Chicago. September was ushered in with drought.

The Telegraph office became an oven, into which waves of heat swept from the composing room every time the door was opened.

The soda pop man with his basket of bottles made the rounds four times a day and did a rousing business. Frequently some member of the staff sent to the drug store for an ice cream "treat" all around.

Barbara came in from a long, dusty trip to the fair grounds one afternoon, just as the spoons were being laid down in the empty tea cream glasses. She pulled off her hat and dropped into the first chair at hand. Her hair lay in wet strings across her forehead.

Evers brought her a glass of ice water. "Sorry you came too late for the frozen dainties, Barbara," he said. "Miss Hader turned and left the group."

Barbara slipped the war. "These are the days when I'd like to get a thousand miles away from this car of mine and forget it ever existed."

Evers smiled. "Better get married. Chicago is full of wives dressed in cool linens, slipping mint lemonade on shaded porches this afternoon. Simplest thing in the world, young lady. Pick a good husky man to do the worrying and be fresh and dainty to meet him on the front porch when he comes home dripping and grimy on a hot summer's night."

"But there are more wives fussing over hot stoves in the kitchen than there are sipping lemonade," argued Barbara. "Don't talk to me about married bliss. I've seen too many married women."

Evers looked at her over his glasses. "Honest to heaven, Barbara, you're getting to talk like a spinster of 45. Better cut it out, even if you do feel that way. Folks will think you're a disappointed woman."

Barbara was stung. "You and the rest of the world may think what you like," she snapped. "I'm sick of the imperfections of men, anyhow. From the time a girl is 31 or 32 they begin to ask her why she hasn't married."

"The poor dears are so conceited they can't believe that any woman gets along without one of them of her own free will."

Evers retreated in mock terror behind a newspaper, his eyes twinkling at Barbara over the top of it now and then.

Instantly ashamed of her outburst, she walked away to her own desk. As she passed the city desk Wells looked up. "I have a hunch for a great story, Miss Hawley."

"Heard you and Evers fighting the old fight on love versus career. This is the idea. Hunt up some little waif in one of these maternity rescue homes and get her views on whether motherhood is worth the price."

"Then catch Ida Storey, the actress, while she's visiting her mother here, and find out whether she regrets sacrificing marriage for a career. Ida must be about 50 now and her name is one of the top five or six on the American stage. She'll tell the truth, too."

"I'll look up Ida this afternoon," answered Barbara. "I'm not equal to the rescue home today. The weather is sticky enough without hunting up any more messes. I hate all this cheap sentiment."

"Don't be too sure you'll find cheap sentiment at the rescue home. Mothers are pretty much alike in whatever circumstances they may be. You may find some bona-fide emotion out there."

Barbara made the appointment with Ida Storey by telephone. Two hours later she was seated opposite Miss Storey on a wide porch of the paternal home.

"That's a rather personal question, isn't it, Miss Hawley?" said the actress when Barbara had made known her mission. "But I've never hesitated to tell the truth yet. Though I'll have to trust you to deal fairly with me in print."

The woman was at least 60, Barbara decided. Her statuesque figure, in a skillfully draped tea gown, might have been that of a much younger woman. But there were lines about her eyes and a somber droop at the corners of her mouth that spoke of greater age.

She lay in a wide swing and talked, easily, without pause.

"I'll tell you my story, Miss Hawley, in a few words. And you can do what you want with it."

"I deliberately chose public life at the age of 20. I had everything then, youth, beauty and love. But there was one thing I did not have—fame."

less and less frequently. My apartment was no longer the rendezvous for the stage crowd. I was unmistakably getting old.

"You understand you must handle this material with discretion?"

Barbara nodded.

Miss Storey sat up in the swing. "If I had it to do over again, I'd marry at 20 and take what came. I believe that poverty and responsibility and heartaches with someone you love are better than material prosperity and independence, alone."

"It's the years after 40 that are the nightmares, my dear. I don't care if you say that in the story. Old age alone is the most horrible fate a woman can meet."

Barbara looked at Miss Storey. Her eyes were burning and her voice was tremulous. She had changed miraculously from the cool, poised woman of the world that greeted Barbara an hour ago.

Barbara was anxious to get away. The woman was telling her things that she did not wish to hear. She rose to go. "Thank you for giving me so much time, Miss Storey. I'll try to deal fairly with the story."

She was out of the house and walking down the quiet street. The sky had turned cloudy and a breeze had sprung up. As Barbara walked, large drops of rain began to patter on the sidewalk.

She hastened her steps. The rain became more violent and the wind swept in little eddies up the street. Barbara began to run. It was only a block to the street car line.

She reached the corner and crept close to a store front to avoid the rain. No cars came. She waited in the pelting rain for a long time. Then she left the shelter of the building front and began to walk.

It was quite dark when she reached home. Her shoes were sodden and her clothes dripped water. As she unlocked her door, the rain suddenly ceased and a flood of sunset light filled the sky.

But a moment later the torrents began again.

Inside the apartment, Barbara stood still and looked around her. No article had been moved since she left that morning. The stillness was broken only by the grip of rain along the gutters.

"The years after 40." What would the years after 40 be, if life was like this at 26?

Barbara went out into the kitchen and put the kettle on the fire. Then she laid a plate and silver for herself at the little table.

Suddenly she turned about, removed the kettle from the stove, turned out the gas, and put the plate and the silver carefully back in their places in the cupboard.

Then she turned out the lights in the front rooms and went back to her bedroom. A few moments later she was lying on her face, in the darkness, listening to the dreary gurgling of the rain outside her window.

The next morning was gray, overhung with clouds, but the rain had stopped.

Barbara caught the seven o'clock street car to town. Her face was haggard. She had fallen into a heavy sleep toward dawn and had waked too late for breakfast.

At a little lunch counter near the Telegraph building she drank a cup of black coffee. Between the lunch room and the office there was a pot store whose windows usually attracted many small boys and girls and some older ones.

The window this morning was full of Persian cats, white, yellow and tiger. Barbara stopped to look at them.

She stood looking at the magnificent animals, forgetful that time was passing. They looked like comfortable, domestic creatures. Barbara looked for a price placard.

There it was, "Twenty-five dollars."

She made a half motion toward the door of the shop.

Somebody said in her ear, "Good morning, Hahn. Yesterday you were talking like an old maid. This morning you seem to be on the point of buying a cat."

"Is it that bad?"
